Re: Systemwide Senate Review of Proposed Presidential Fee Policy for Graduate Student
In Absentia Registration

Dear Susan,

As requested, I distributed for systemwide Senate review the proposed revisions to the Presidential Fee Policy for Graduate Student In Absentia Registration. All ten Academic Senate divisions and two systemwide committees (UCPB and CCGA) submitted comments. These comments were discussed at Academic Council’s July 28 meeting and are attached for your reference.

We understand that the current policy allows graduate students to conduct research and training activities related to their degree program outside of California with an In Absentia status, provided they are under supervision of UC faculty. Students with In Absentia status pay 15% of Tuition and the Student Services Fee. The current policy allows Graduate Deans to grant special case exceptions to the requirement that students be located “outside of California.” The revised policy would permit Deans to establish “a local campus region” as a new geographical limit on In Absentia registration, rather than limiting eligibility to students outside the state. The policy notes that it will help graduate students working outside of the local campus area to continue their degree progress while maintaining access to UC programs and services such as health insurance.

The Senate supports the policy revision to the extent that it increases flexibility and transparency and ensures more equitable and efficient implementation of the existing In Absentia policy. Reviewers also raised several questions and concerns that we encourage you to consider as you further develop the policy.

First, the Senate’s review of this policy would have been informed by data indicating the number of graduate students with In Absentia status each year, and an estimate of the number of graduate students who would be eligible to apply for In Absentia status under the revised rules. Another question we could not answer with the materials provided is how the University calculated the 15% figure in 2009, and on what basis that figure is still relevant in 2021. These data would have enabled a clearer analysis of the policy’s budgetary impact on campuses.

Senate reviewers also ask that the policy discuss the principles and mechanisms that should guide a campus’s determination of its “local campus region.” We agree with the reviews, which suggest that the proposed definition of “local region” should not be decided by a single Graduate Dean, as outlined in the policy. Rather, it should be based on input from the broader campus community, including departments and graduate students.

The Senate is also concerned that the In Absentia Policy reflects an institutional view of graduate students as sources of revenue, rather than as individuals with educational needs and goals. In this policy and other policies pertaining to graduate students, we encourage the University to consider the students’ educational needs first before weighing in on the financial impact on the University. Our goal as faculty is to advance policies and initiatives that reduce financial burdens on graduate students while facilitating their degree progress. Such efforts are especially critical for students who are in the research and writing phase of their programs, the target group for this policy. This is the point in graduate study when many Ph.D. students get discouraged and are at great risk for not completing their degree.

We also encourage the University to consider the In Absentia Policy and other residency policies in the context of shifts to remote study during the pandemic and students’ increasing ability to access UC resources remotely. We imagine alternative models for In Absentia, such as ones that include a lower percentage or a full waiver of tuition and fees or the elimination of the “local area” provision, that could help support students and strengthen graduate education even more. To this end, the University should perform an analysis of these alternatives and the continued relevance of the 15% tuition/fee structure in the context of budgetary costs and educational benefits.

Thank you for the opportunity to opine. Please do not hesitate to contact me if you have additional questions.

Sincerely,

Mary Gauvain, Chair

Re: GC comments on fee policy for graduate student in absentia registration

Dear Chair Cohen:

Graduate Council members were asked to review the proposed policy revisions and provide comments to me by email. There was general support for the revisions. The following comments and questions were also shared by individual members:

- In III.C. the first bullet indicates that students will be assessed "15 percent of the combined Tuition and Student Services Fee" and then the second bullet refers to the "FULL health insurance fees." But it is unclear from this description whether the NRST and PDST in bullets 4 and 5 will be assessed at the full level or at the 15% level. This should be clarified in the text or in the FAQ for those who are not familiar with the nuances.
- How would the policy be applied for international students or those that need to pay the "out of state" component of tuition? Would they only need to pay 15% of that component as well?
- The guidelines regarding the campus region are vague. It would be beneficial to have this more fleshed out so that there is clear guidance and consistency between campuses.
- Campuses are given leeway on how much of the campus fee they are allowed to assess to students in absentia. Some would advocate for a more firm policy and a low percentage, if campus fees are mostly for services that pertain to physical operations on campus.
- It would help to further clarify what is allowed and what is not. Is the student allowed to communicate with his/her advisor only via e-mail? What about a phone call using non-university phone equipment? What about videoconferencing using non-university facilities (e.g., using personal Skype accounts on personally-owned phones)? Is the student allowed to use campus computer equipment remotely? That may impinge on faculty and other students who are using the same pool of equipment. The connection between "studying or in-person collaboration" and "resources or learning environment" is not clear. The two bullet points should be worded more clearly and the conditions should be stated more thoroughly, especially because remote work is quite possible within most PhD fields.

- Unless the student is a GSR on a project unrelated to his/her dissertation, how can a student be a GSR and comply with the following two provisions?
  - Must involve only indirect supervision appropriate to evaluating the student’s academic progress and performance (e.g., correspondence via e-mail or review of written work) from UC faculty during the in absentia period.
  - Must involve no significant studying or in-person collaboration with UC faculty during the in absentia period to ensure that units do not entail direct access to the resources or learning environment of any UC campus.

Michael Boots

RE: Systemwide Review of Proposed Revisions to the Presidential Fee Policy on Graduate Student In Absentia Registration

At its May 26, 2021 meeting, the Council on Planning and Budget (CPB) discussed the proposed revisions to the Presidential Fee Policy on Graduate Student In Absentia Registration.

The current policy allows registration in absentia only if the off-campus activity occurred outside of California. The revised policy changes this rule to authorize the individual campuses to establish local zones of eligibility. It was noted that the campus zone of eligibility is meant to be drawn so that in-person access to campus resources is not feasible.

The Council found the proposed revisions to be straightforward and reasonable.

As a separate issue, the Council observed that the local implementation of the revision should be done with consideration to the increasingly online nature of university operations. Although the policy specifies that it applies to students whose studies require them to reside in eligible zones and does not apply to taking online courses, it is unclear how this would apply to a student whose graduate research is entirely computational.

Dear Chair Gauvain,

The Divisional Executive Board, councils, and committees appreciated the opportunity to review the (Systemwide Senate Review) Proposed Presidential Policy on Fee Policy for Graduate Student in Absentia Registration. The Executive Board reviewed the proposal and divisional council feedback at its meeting on June 8, 2021. The Executive Board unanimously supported the proposal. Members concurred with the observations in the enclosed divisional council responses including questioning the purpose of the policy given that many resources are available remotely and online. They agreed with the idea of an assessment to evaluate campus impact following several years after any policy changes. Lastly, it would be helpful to clarify whether the intention is to have a retroactive start date given the draft policy’s “Fall Term 2020” effective date.

At its meeting on May 21, 2021, the Graduate Council reviewed and discussed the Proposed Presidential Fee Policy for Graduate Student In Absentia Registration and offers the following observations for your consideration:

Members recognized the intent to improve equity and access, but noted that In Absentia Registration is problematic to enforce given that many resources are available remotely and online now, and it perhaps makes less sense than in the past due to the wider availability of resources. A radius determination may or may not matter. Members recommended consultation with the Library about post-pandemic plans for licensing, which will impact the availability of resources. Members recommended an assessment after any policy changes in several years to evaluate campus impact.

Re: Proposed Revision to the Fee Policy for Graduate Student In Absentia Registration

The revision to the Fee Policy for Graduate Student In Absentia Registration, was proposed by the Council of Graduate Deans. It would permit graduate deans to establish “a local campus region within which in absentia registration will not be considered” instead of limiting eligibility to students studying outside of California. It is anticipated that the proposed revision will increase transparency and promote more equitable application of the policy.

The Merced Division Senate and School Executive Committees were invited to comment on the proposed revised policy. Comments were received from the Committee on Academic Planning and Resource Allocation (CAPRA), Committee on Research (CoR), and the Graduate Council (GC). All comments are appended for your consideration.

CAPRA recommends reexamining the entirety of the policy, as well as other policies governing residency, in light of our experiences with the pandemic. CAPRA states that policies governing residency/remote work should balance the benefits of flexibility for students (and staff and faculty, in the case of other policies) with the benefit of a sense of community when people come together on campus. In consideration of resources, CAPRA observes that many of the campus resources (library, computational, virtual programs, advising by faculty advisor) can now be used by students working from anywhere due to the telework advances forced by the pandemic. CAPRA wonders if the 15% of the tuition and combined student services fees paid by In Absentia students would be adequate given the expanded access to “local” yet remotely accessible resources.

CoR echoes CAPRA’s recommendation to revisit policies governing residency, especially concerning students who must relocate for personal reasons (e.g., to follow a spouse’s move) but who can still continue their research and studies remotely. Additionally, CoR would appreciate clarification on whether fees traditionally covered by GSRs are also reduced by 85% when a student is on In Absentia status, thus producing a cost savings to the grantors of these GSRs. GC also suggests further clarification of the policy. In regard to students’ access to UC campus resources, Sections II and III of the proposed policy seem to provide differing definitions of “campus resources.”
A Divisional Council member commented that the Graduate Dean’s determination of the “local campus region” should be made in consultation with the Graduate Council. The member also suggested that there be a clearer distinction between the In Absentia status and the Leave of Absence.

The Merced Division thanks you for the opportunity to review this policy.

Sincerely,

Re: Proposed Presidential Policy – Fee Policy for Graduate Student In Absentia Registration

The policy reduces Tuition and Student Service Fees to 15% of the total cost for students working “In absentia,” with the rationale: “This reflects that student in absentia have less access to UC resources than do other UC students, but continue to utilize some level of advising and other University resources to facilitate timely academic progress toward degree completion.” The previous version defines “in absentia” as outside of California. Students living in California, but not in Merced, have sometimes received exceptions. The proposed change to the policy would replace the “outside of California” definition with “a local campus region within which in absentia registration is granted.” This would result in the policy being applied more equitably and reduce the number of exceptions.

CAPRA agrees with taking action that enables more equitable and efficient implementation of the policy. However, CAPRA feels that the entire policy needs to be revisited (along with several other policies governing residency) in light of our experiences with the pandemic. Future policies should balance the benefits of flexibility for students (and staff and faculty, in the case of other policies) with the benefit of a sense of community when people come together on campus. For example, we note that many of the campus’s resources (library, computational, virtual programs, advising by faculty advisor) can now be used by students working from anywhere due to the advances in telework that were forced by the pandemic. If we enable reduced tuition/fees CAPRA believes that more students would choose to work in absentia. This may be appropriate in some cases, but the policy needs to be revisited with the broader concerns in mind. We note that if all graduate students working remotely in this past year paid only 15% tuition and fees, it would have had a significant impact on university resources even though those students would have retained the same benefits that in residence students experienced in 2020-2021.

We appreciate the opportunity to opine.

Regarding the requirements of in absentia status, what about students who must relocate for personal reasons (e.g., to follow a spouse’s move), but who can still continue their research and studies remotely? This scenario does not appear to be addressed by this policy.

Will fees traditionally covered by GSRs also be reduced by 85%, thus producing a cost savings to the grantors of these GSRs?

RE: PROPOSED REVISION TO THE FEE POLICY FOR GRADUATE STUDENT IN ABSENTIA REGISTRATION

Graduate Council (GC) has reviewed the proposed revision to the presidential policy, the Fee Policy for Graduate Student In Absentia Registration. The revision, proposed by the Council of Graduate Deans, would permit graduate deans to establish “a local campus region within which in absentia registration will not be considered” instead of limiting eligibility to students studying outside of California. It is GC’s understanding that, currently, graduate students can register In Absentia while planning to stay in California if their individual requests for exception are approved by their campus’s graduate dean.

GC concurs with the Council of Graduate Deans and Provost Brown that the proposed revision will increase transparency and promote more equitable application of the policy. GC wonders, however, if the definition of a “Local Campus Region” may need further clarification. Specifically, the policy document, in Section II, defines the Local Campus Region as an area “beyond which students could not easily access campus resources.” In contrast, in Section III.A., it is stated that the In Absentia units a student accrues while registered in absentia may not “entail direct access to the resources or learning environment of any UC campus” (emphasis added). Does this mean that, for example, a UC Merced student who conducts field research in Northern California and collaborates with a researcher at UC Davis or UC Berkeley would not qualify for the in absentia status?

Graduate Council appreciates the opportunity to opine.

The Committee noted that the effective date for this policy is Fall 2020; since it was well into 2021 before this document was disseminated for review, the role of shared governance vis-à-vis review of this policy seems superficial. The Santa Barbara Division distributed the proposed revised policy to the Council on Planning and Budget (CPB), Graduate Council (GC), Committee on Diversity and Equity (CDE), Committee on International Education (CIE), and the Faculty Executive Committees (FECs) of the College of Letters and Science (L&S), College of Engineering (COE), Gevirtz Graduate School of Education (GGSE), and the Bren School of Environmental Science and Management (BREN). The Committee on International Education opted not to opine. Each individual response is attached for your review. Overall, the Santa Barbara Division supports the revised fee policy, and offers the following comments below.

The L&S FEC emphasizes the need for additional guidance on how to determine what constitutes a “local campus region.” The Committee also recognizes the substantial financial burden placed on many of our graduate students, and advocates for an even lower fee percentage – or even a fully waived in absentia option - in the future. CPB indicates the desirability of a fiscal analysis based on the number of graduate students who are in absentia each year, and the number of these students who would be eligible to apply for in absentia status. These figures could help give a clearer justification for the policy change. CPB also suggests that it may be inequitable to charge campus-based fees for students who register in absentia, and requests additional justification for why such students cannot collaborate with faculty at UC campuses other than their home institution. Finally, CPB expresses concern that this policy seemingly took effect nine months ago, before undergoing the proper review process.

Re: Presidential Fee Policy for Graduate Student In Absentia Registration

The Council on Planning & Budget (CPB) has reviewed the proposed Presidential Fee Policy for Graduate Student In Absentia Registration (the Policy). In general the Policy seems beneficial to both the University and graduate students in reducing the number of students with status lapse. The Policy aims at eliminating both requests and processing of “reinstate” petitions and thus simplifying administrative workflows.

Briefly, this Policy allows (i) PhD students who have advanced to candidacy and (ii) Master’s and graduate professional degree students who have completed one year of coursework to conduct research and training activities directly related to their degree program outside their local campus region with an “in absentia” status, provided that they are under indirect supervision of UC faculty. The students in this status need to pay only 15% of the combined tuition and student services fee; however, they have to pay the full health insurance fees, campus-based fees, and applicable nonresident tuition and professional degree supplemental tuition. These students are eligible for University fellowships and research assistantships and their “in absentia” duration counts towards the residency requirement.

The Policy was originally issued in 2009, and the draft under review is a revision. The primary change is to replace the location of research and coursework being “outside of California” by “outside of the local campus region” determined by the graduate deans of the local campus.

The Council is generally supportive of this policy. There are, however, several points that need to be considered further.

First, the current draft does not include a document that provides a fiscal analysis such as the number of students who are in the “in absentia” status each year, the expected number of students who will possibly apply for “in absentia” status, etc. These numbers could give a clear justification of the revised policy.
Second, the reduced cost is only for the tuition and student services fees. Given that the students are not expected to be on campus, it may not be equitable to ask the students to pay campus-based fees.

Third, the Policy allows the students to take courses from non-UC schools but not to study or to collaborate in-person with UC faculty in any UC campus. There is no clear justification of the latter, e.g., for faculty in a non-home campus.

Finally, the Policy is intended to take effect roughly 9 months ago. This is either a typo or an indication that the reviews of these proposed policy changes are not being executed in a timely fashion.

Re: Systemwide Review of Proposed Presidential Policy – Fee Policy for Graduate Student In Absentia Registration

At its meeting on May 20, 2021, the Faculty Executive Committee of the College of Letters and Science (FEC) reviewed the proposed Presidential Policy – Fee Policy for Graduate Student In Absentia Registration. The proposed change gives each campus Graduate Dean the flexibility to determine a narrower region for exclusion of eligibility for 15% in-absentia fee status, rather than basing exclusion on binary in-state/out-of-state status.

The committee expresses general support for this increase in flexibility for our graduate students who may benefit from seeking in-absentia status, with a few comments.

One concern raised was the lack of guidance relating to what constitutes a “local campus region.” Acknowledging that the policy gives each campus Graduate Dean the freedom to define said region based on local geographies, the committee feels it would still be appropriate to provide clearer guidance on general distances or transit times that represent “access to substantially fewer instructional resources and student services.”

The committee also recognizes the substantial financial burden placed on many of our graduate students, and wishes to voice its support for a lower fee percentage – or even a fully waived – in-absentia option in the future.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment.

Re: Systemwide Fee Policy for Graduate Students In Absentia Registration

Dear Mary,

The Santa Cruz Division has reviewed the proposed revisions to the Fee Policy for Graduate Students In Absentia Registration. Our Committees on Affirmative Action and Diversity (CAAD), Graduate Council (GC), and Planning and Budget (CPB) responded. Proposed revisions to the policy include changes to language that would permit Graduate Deans to establish “a local campus region within which in absentia registration will not be considered,” instead of limiting eligibility to students outside of California, as with current policy.

All three reviewing committees expressed support for the proposed revisions. Graduate Council noted that the policy will take into account the local context and will better meet the needs of graduate students at each campus. The proposed policy change also has the potential to reduce the number of exception requests to the Graduate Division, thus increasing equity in applicability of the policy.

Graduate Council suggests that the process and decision for defining the region/boundary for In Absentia registration should be undertaken as a collaboration between the Graduate Dean and the Graduate Council at each campus, rather than be solely left to the Graduate Dean. This would provide broader disciplinary perspectives on what the region boundary should look like at each campus, and help create a more equitable campus policy. CAAD suggests that each campus consider the high cost of living as a reason for narrowly defining the local campus region, in order to ensure that graduate students are not incurring substantial housing debt when living near the campus where rents may be high. CAAD also recommends that graduate students in absentia should still be entitled access to UC Library services, especially as they conduct research while in absentia.

CPB more pointedly addressed issues beyond the current revisions for review, and suggested a tension between graduate education as intrinsic to a public R1 university and graduate education as a revenue generating enterprise. This has implications for graduate students in terms of affordability. CPB suggests the campus should consider a structure that prioritizes support to increase affordability for graduate students at the phase of research/writing, placing student educational needs first. CPB also suggests that accessibility and local region vary—for example a student in the lab sciences who has completed their lab work might benefit from in absentia status even if they remain within the local region. Similarly, defining “easy” access can vary for students, even if they are living in the same geographic region.
The Santa Cruz Division appreciates the opportunity to comment on the proposed changes to the Fee Policy for Graduate Students In Absentia Registration.

Sincerely,

Re: Divisional Review of the Fee Policy for Graduate Student in Absentia Registration

Dear Professor Gauvain,

The proposed revisions to the Fee Policy for Graduate Student in Absentia Registration were distributed to San Diego Divisional Senate standing committees and discussed at the June 14, 2021 Divisional Senate Council meeting. Senate Council endorsed the proposal, and provided the following comments.

It was suggested that rather than leaving the definition of “local campus area” solely to the discretion of one individual on each campus (the Graduate Dean), the proposed definition could be submitted for consideration to the broader campus community, including Department Chairs and graduate student representatives, to arrive at a more uniform definition or rubric for defining the region. A question was raised about how the 15% reduction of tuition and fees was calculated in 2009, and whether that level of reduction remains sensible and equitable in 2021, considering many campus systems have been substantially upgraded since then so the actual cost of these students may be less now.

The responses from the Divisional Committee on Planning and Budget and Graduate Council are attached.

Sincerely,

Steven Constable

SUBJECT: UC Policy for Graduate Student in Absentia Registration

The CPB endorses the proposal to amend the policy for graduate students in absentia registration to expand the definition of "in absentia" to work locations outside of the local area. This is clearly a sensible and overdue amendment that will reduce administrative work for graduate school staff, department staff, and affected graduate students.

The committee had one suggestion and one question. The suggestion was not to leave the definition of "local campus area" solely to the discretion of one individual on each campus (the Graduate Dean) - a policy likely to create haphazard differences between campuses. Instead, either the proposed definition could be submitted for comment to each local campus community for a period of feedback prior to adaptation, or Graduate Deans, in consultation with Department Chairs and graduate student representatives, could arrive at a more uniform definition or rubric for defining the region.

The question was how the reduction to 15% of tuition and fees was selected in 2009, and whether that level of reduction remains sensible and equitable in 2021. Perhaps, for example, campus systems have been upgraded so substantially that the actual cost of these students is far less than 15%, so the students or their funding sources (departments, grants) are being overcharged. We encourage the UCOP to examine examples of graduate fee structures across campuses, disaggregated into services that are or are not accessible remotely, to determine whether the discounted rate of 15% is fair to graduate students, departments, and other stakeholders.

Sincerely,

Kwai Ng, Chair

Re: Comments on the Proposed Presidential Policy – Fee Policy for Graduate Student
In Absentia Registration

Dear Mary:

UCSF’s Graduate Council reviewed amendments to proposed Presidential Policy – Fee Policy for Graduate Student In Absentia Registration. It is our understanding that the change would permit graduate deans to establish “a local campus region within which in absentia registration will not be considered” instead of limiting eligibility to students studying outside of California. This should lower the number of ‘exceptions’ that are currently regularly granted by graduate deans.

After reviewing the change in the fee policy, our Graduate Council found them fully appropriate, and would allow the policy to be more equitably applied.

Thank you for the opportunity to provide feedback on this review. If you have any questions, please let me know.

RE: Systemwide Review of Proposed Presidential Policy – Fee Policy for Graduate Student In Absentia Registration

Dear Mary,

On July 6, 2021, Systemwide Committee on Planning and Budget (CPB) reviewed the Systemwide Review of Proposed Presidential Policy – Fee Policy for Graduate Student In Absentia Registration. The current policy calls for students who are doing approved coursework and/or research outside of California to pay 15% of Tuition and Student Services Fees in order to register and maintain access to “certain University programs and services such as health insurance.” At present, students who do approved coursework and/or research inside California are not eligible to register In Absentia unless they request and are granted exceptions. This proposal is to give campuses the authority to determine whether these exceptions can be campus norms: in effect, each campus could determine if it wants a policy to grant In Absentia registration eligibility to all graduate students doing approved work away from their home campus but still within California. UCPB supports the proposed change as it will streamline a current practice that is cumbersome and that draws somewhat arbitrary lines between research that is conducted within and without California.

Some UCPB members wondered if the In Absentia policy could go even further to ameliorate financial burdens for graduate students research needs and lower time-to-degree by: 1) lowering the 15% even further; and 2) eliminating the “local area” provision. UCPB notes that the documents contain a tension between viewing graduate education: a) as intrinsic to an R1 public university; and b) as an enterprise that provides revenue to the University. This tension has important implications on how the policy impacts graduate students. On the one hand, the rationale given for the policy is expressed in terms of support for graduate students and their graduate education: to help graduate students “make continued progress towards their degree while maintaining access to certain University programs and services such as health insurance.” On the other hand, a rationale is also given that suggests the In Absentia policy is a mechanism to keep students in a tuition-tethered structure so as not to lose revenue. This is expressed in a response to a FAQ concerning what is meant by special cases: “Deans are expected to be very judicious in granting exceptions, since granting exceptions has fiscal ramifications: students who normally would pay full tuition and fees will bring in less revenue for the University when they pay only 15 percent of Tuition and Student Services Fee” (p. 6).

Given that In Absentia is typically granted when graduate students have completed their coursework and are working towards their thesis research and writing, UCPB wonders if this is precisely the wrong stage to be considering graduate students as a source of revenue: In Absentia is a period when students are not employed as Academic Student Employees (ASE), so it is also a period when students might have to self-fund (if not supported by departments or faculty with fellowships, GSRships or their own external funding). For students who fall in that category, the In Absentia policy might very well be prohibitive, with a main impact of extending their time-to-degree if they have to pay it out of pocket, or lose connections with their advisors by going on a leave of absence. Especially with regard to doctoral students, UCPB believes that once they have passed all required coursework and qualifying exams, and are solely focused on completing their dissertations, UC’s administrative structures should be organized to facilitate this outcome, at the most optimal pace and lowest cost to students that is possible.

UCPB also questions the new language that defines the Local Campus Region: namely, as an area “defined by the graduate dean beyond which students could not easily access campus resources.” For students who have completed all their research (fieldwork or lab work) and need an exclusive focus on publications/dissertation to finish, their best path to degree completion might include rarely or never coming to campus, and utilizing only online research resources: their exact geographical location or proximity to campus would be irrelevant. Thinking about In Absentia in terms of graduate student educational needs first, rather than in terms of revenue provided by students, might lead to other policy changes that could strengthen graduate education at UC.

Cheers,

Sean Malloy, Chair
UCPB

ACADEMIC COUNCIL CHAIR MARY GAUVAIN

Dear Chair Gauvain,

At its May 5 meeting, CCGA discussed the proposed revisions to the In Absentia Policy for graduate students. The committee feels that – as AVP Alcocer wrote – the changes proposed largely formalize a practice that has been in place routinely on the campuses. CCGA also feels that the revisions will make the policy more transparent and accessible to students.

The committee suggests that the graduate deans be asked to consult the local graduate councils on the definition of the “local campus region.” Graduate Councils have wide interdisciplinary representation across the campuses, and might provide valuable insights.

CCGA appreciates the opportunity to weigh in on this matter. If you have any questions or need additional clarification, please do not hesitate to ask.

Sincerely,
