Re: Academic Considerations for the Athletics Conference Realignment (Big Ten)

At the April 13, 2023, meeting of the Executive Board, members heard from Athletics Director Jarmond and his colleagues about plans for the transition to the Big 10 college athletics conference. Executive Board members focused on the importance of centering the academic mission of the university, including ensuring that a change in athletic conference did not adversely impact the learning experiences of students, including athletes and their classmates. Concerns about student learning and wellbeing in the Big 10 context prompted a broader conversation about the extent to which some student athletes at UCLA are able to learn in the context of huge demands on their time.

Members voted to approve a motion to send this letter requesting that the Student and Postdoctoral Scholar Well-Being Committee (SPSWC), a joint subcommittee of the Graduate and Undergraduate Councils, look into the question of the hours that student athletes spend on athletics activities and whether or how this affects student well-being. This request reflects present-day concerns, not only Big 10-related issues.

If I may suggest, some approaches may include ensuring the SPSWC understands the NCAA regulations on time required for athletics activities (practice hours, etc.) and then determining whether the campus is in compliance, reviewing the academic-related sections of the Student-Athlete Handbook, and engaging with the Bruin Athletic Council (BAC) comprised of student representatives from each of the 25 teams to understand the academic experience of student athletes.

The Executive Board requests a response by the end of the Fall 2023 quarter.

Re: Athletic Conference Realignment

Dear Chair Cattelino,

At its meeting on October 24, 2022, the Council on Planning and Budget (CPB) reviewed the Executive Board’s request for advisement on the University’s Athletic Conference Realignment. Members offered the following comments and questions.

Members comments were focused on the priorities for use of funds. Most discussion focused on the “first best use” of funds. Some members opined that it would be most appropriate to pay off the debt that Athletics ran into during the pandemic, and decrease the dependence of Athletics on campus support. Others believe that funds should be shared with other campus programs. Several members questioned whether there would be a requirement from the UC system to share funding with the Office of the President or UC Berkeley, and whether this would affect campus autonomy in fund allocation.

Several members proposed tracking and monitoring the impact of the change on athletes’ academic performance and their welfare. Other members commented that the move is clearly driven by an effort to enhance revenue, and were concerned that there was limited consideration for the welfare and academic performance of student athletes. Given that these athletes efforts generate revenue for the university, some members recommended that revenue be used to support athletes who are injured in performance of their sport.

Re: Athletics Conference Realignment (Big Ten)

In a joint session on December 2, 2022, the Undergraduate and Graduate Councils discussed the Executive Board’s request for advisement on UCLA’s move to the Big Ten Athletic Conference. The issue was previously reviewed by the Councils’ joint Committee on Student and Postdoctoral Scholar Well-Being, which invited guests from the Department of Intercollegiate Athletics to its meeting on November 15, 2022 to discuss the impact of the transition on the student-athlete experience.

At the committee’s request, Athletics presented the attached report outlining best- and worst-case travel scenarios for Big Ten teams. Projections show that student-athletes across all sports would miss between 3-6 additional days of class per year, with additional travel days likely not spread evenly over the 33 weeks of instruction but largely concentrated in a season (i.e., a single quarter or mostly a single quarter). To mitigate negative effects on student-athlete welfare and academic success, Athletics identified various strategies such as encouraging enrollment in Monday-Wednesday classes when in season, so as to avoid conflicts with Thursday-Sunday travel schedules, and providing additional chartered transportation with increased wi-fi to facilitate study during travel. Other strategies included scheduling games at neutral sites closer to the Los Angeles area, and aligning trip dates across teams and schools (e.g. USC) to increase opportunities for shared travel.

Overall, the Councils worry that the Big Ten conference realignment prioritizes competitive play over the academic component of the student-athlete experience. While acknowledging Athletics’ efforts to provide robust academic support for student-athletes, members felt that the proposed strategies may not be effective in the long term, and voiced concerns about unforeseen negative impacts on academic outcomes, should students have difficulty accessing required courses that are offered only once per year or on certain days of the week. Members and student representatives recommend gathering robust input from current student-athletes and alumni, representing a broad spectrum of teams, in order to best understand their experiences and concerns.

Members recommend that the Executive Board invite Athletics leadership to a future meeting to provide further assessment of Big Ten travel factors and academic impacts. Going forward, the Councils underscore the importance of educating faculty about the constraints and nuances of the University’s relationship with student-athletes.
